

Mandy Morley, Teacher,
Haydn Primary School

- Primary English and Curriculum Leadership
- Raising standards in Literacy
- Monitoring and intervention strategies

'I am continually looking for new ideas and innovations in my area of expertise in order to make learning enjoyable and accessible to all children. I appreciate the chance to work with other schools as this gives me the opportunity to take new ideas back to my school as well as the satisfaction of supporting others through the processes that I have been through.'

Mandy has been working in Nottingham City schools for over 14 years, with experience across KS2. She leads literacy at Haydn Primary School and has worked, as part of the senior management team, on their journey to being a school judged as 'outstanding' in all areas.

She has extensive experience of coaching leaders and class teachers in her own and other City schools. Mandy was also a lead teacher in the ECaW programme, supporting schools through the process of raising standards of learning and teaching in literacy.

She has led projects on 'Talk for Writing' and has worked closely with KS1 to support and moderate SATs and the phonics assessments at the end of Year 1. Most recently Mandy has led the implementation of the New Curriculum for Literacy and has been given the responsibility of accelerating learning in lower KS2.

Mandy is able to provide tailored, specialist support for Literacy Leaders and school leadership to raise standards of Literacy across school: promote effective monitoring: lead planned interventions and develop curriculum change.
